Congress targets China's recruitment of US talent

DANIEL FLATLEY & JANEFLORIN July 19

CONGRESS IS AIMING to hobble China's ability to recruit scientists and academics in the US as part of broader moves in Washington to confront the Asian nation's growing clout.

The strained relationship between the world's two biggest economies, even at the level of academic inquiry that has attracted hundreds of thousands of Chinese students and scholars in the US.

The Biden administration is planning a range of moves to protect American interests in the region, including issuing a warning on Friday to investors about the risks of doing business in Hong Kong.

For years, Congress, federal research agencies, the national security agencies and universities have been working to root out malign foreign talent recruitment, Iowa Republican Representative Randy Feenstra, who introduced the measure, said during a committee hearing on the legislation.

The US, UK and their allies on Monday formally attributed the Microsoft Exchange hack to actors affiliated with the Chinese government and accused the Chinese government of a broad array of "malicious cyber activities".

The question of how to counter attempts by Beijing to obtain sensitive or proprietary information through means other than traditional espionage has proved vexing for lawmakers and law enforcement officials alike.

Chinese government. The Senate took a stab at it with a proposal to give the federal scrutiny of donations to US institutions of higher education from overseas. However that was watered down when it was included in broader legislation to enhance US competitiveness after colleges and universities complained that its requirements would be onerous and harmful to US innovation.

Feenstra's provision would have the National Science Foundation establish a requirement that individuals certify that they aren't an active participant of a "malign foreign talent recruitment programme".

The Chinese government-backed initiative has been tied to several high-profile arrests, including Harvard professor Charles Lieber, who was indicted on charges of making false statements to authorities regarding his participation in the programme.

The US also charged four Chinese nationals affiliated with the Ministry of State Security with a campaign to hack into computer systems of dozens of companies, universities and government entities in the US and abroad between 2011 and 2018.

Poll: Two-thirds of Japanese doubt Games can be safe

REUTERS Tokyo, July 19

TWO-THIRDS OF PEOPLE in Japan do not believe the country can host a safe and secure Olympics amid a fresh wave of coronavirus infections, according to a survey published by the Asahi newspaper just four days before the opening ceremony in Tokyo.

Experts expressed doubt about the ability of Olympic organisers to control coronavirus infections, with 35% saying they were opposed to the Games going ahead.

Three-quarters of the 1,444 people in the telephone survey said they agreed with a decision to ban spectators from events.

In the poll, 68% of respondents expressed doubt about the ability of Olympic organisers to control coronavirus infections, with 35% saying they were opposed to the Games going ahead.

International Olympic Committee president Thomas Bach has said he hopes the Japanese public will warm to the Games once competition begins and as Japanese athletes begin winning medals.

Games officials on Sunday reported the first Covid-19 case among competitors in the athletes' village in Tokyo where 11,000 athletes are expected staying during the Games.

Since July 2, Tokyo 2020 organisers have reported 58 positive cases among athletes, officials and journalists.

China's luxury retirement homes attract millions

BLOOMBERG July 19

RETIREE WILLIAM TANG recently decided to swap his life in downtown Shanghai for a new lifestyle in a retirement home in the city's far west, paying $320,000 to rent a two-bedroom apartment for 15 years.

"It is more like a resort," Tang said after viewing the Ardor Gardens showroom, which highlights amenities including an indoor swimming pool, yoga rooms, wine tastings and round-the-clock care.

For a growing number of Chinese and international investors, elder-care developments like Ardor Gardens are becoming irresistible bets. Money is pouring into the sector and renewed attention on just how quickly China is aging.

Sydney-based property and infrastructure company Lendlease Corp, which has $280 million into Ardor Gardens, is among investors that see the policy environment becoming more favorable as the Chinese government tackles its demographic challenges.

"The market will likely be completely different 10 years from now," said Lendlease's China president Ding Hui. "If you wait for 10 years before starting to think of buying land, learning, training up a team and developing a business model, very likely you would have missed the opportunity."

According to China's latest population data, the number of residents aged 60 and above has risen 47% over the past decade to 260 million, more

Unesco raps Australia over Great Barrier Reef proposal

ASSOCIATED PRESS Beijing, July 19

THE CHINESE HOST of this year's meeting of the UN World Heritage Committee has defended the body's proposal to label the Great Barrier Reef as in danger against Australian government suspicion that China influenced the finding for political reasons.

The committee, which is meeting both virtually and in the city of Fuzhou for the next two weeks, will consider the draft decision on Friday.

"Australia, as a member state of the World Heritage Committee, should... attach importance to the opinions of the advisory bodies and earnestly fulfil the duty of World Heritage protection instead of making groundless accusations against other states," Fan Xuejun, the Chinese vice minister of education and sports, said on Sunday.

Australian environment minister Susan Ley did not comment on the Chinese criticism.
